Speaking generally, however, the scheme of retrenchment in the clerical service propoundof commendation. There is no doubt that the salaries paid to clerks by the Govern-paid by mercantile firms, while on the other hand the salaries paid to the more responsimen of equivalent attainments and special training outside the service; but as there is no question of any further increase of salaries in any branch of the service the latter point is not one that calls for any special attention; collateral advantages in the way of leave and pension no doubt make up for the smaller salaries and there is no serious discontent. So far as the higher offices are concerned, then, since no general reduction of salaries is possible the only direction in which retrenchment can be effected is by the amalgamation of offices and a gradual reduction in the num-

Ryrie did with the replies.

rial I may briefly state my conclusion on the whole matter. I consider that it has been conclosively shown by the Colonial Secretary that by gambling in recent years, the community taken ! as a whole has progressed, and that it is bound to continue to progress; that the financial position of the colony is satisfactory; that a loan for the public works extraordinary is immediately has ceasary, and that the fact of this necessity does not in any way controvert the soundness of the financial position; that no case whatever has been male out in support of the motion for the immediate reduction of cortain solaries, and that it is to be regretted that the motion was made that there is evidence in the Memorial, as we as elsewhere, that the reasons orged in the Finmotion were not the sole or the mainly operative momorialists. The concluding despatch is from the recretary | ment. of State to the Governor, dated 21st April, 1893 in which Lord Ripon says :-"I have already, in my desputch No. 25 of 15th February, dealt with the protest itself, and in my despatch No 24 of the 14th February, I informed you that Her Majesty would not be advised to disal'ow the Ordinance, and that I was satisfied that no sufficient reason had been shown for reducing the salaries of any of the existing officers of the service.

I have now again carefully considered the position as presented by the innofficial members in their 'memorial,' and will proceed' to explain the reasons which confirm me in the view that my decision was the right one. I fully admit that the reduction of salaries of civil corvants is a measure which may be taken under stress of financial necessity, but I do not see that the condition of the flances of Hongkong justifles such an exceptional step. The revenue has of Macriven & Cameron are recommended by steadily improved every year for the last 2,317 Newspapers:to a sum (omitting exceptional wisidfalls) of about $2,100,000 in 1892, a rise of 76 per cent; It is true that the expenditure has largely in- Mansivas & Campbon, Edinburgh, Sootland.

To act on them -or rather on the interpretations assigned to them-would be to trest the remuneration of civil servants on a principle which appears to me objectionable. It would be saying in effect that salaries may be made to rise and fall with the rise and fall in rise and full of share values in the local money

"Even if it could be shown that the civil servants have been more fortunate than the facts as to house rent and other items in the cost of living would have justified, it must be Unofficial Member, the late Mr. Ryrie; and (3) remembered that owing to my predaces or's refusal to fix the salaries on a sterling basis the civil servants are, through the full in exchange, Brown & Co., H. "I desire therefore that you will appoint a Committee for this purpose, over which the Colonial Secretary or the Chief Justice might preside, with one or two other Government officers and certain unafficial members of the Council as colleagues; it being clearly understood that the reference to the Committee does not extend to the question of reducing the salary of existing officers. "You will be good enough to communicate this despatch to the unofficial members by sending a copy to the senior among them and by laying it on the table of the Council together with my two despatoues referred to in a pre-
